

The Ohio Crime Victims' Bill of Rights, also known as Marsy's Law, was passed by voters in November 2017. This law affords victims certain Constitutional rights which must be protected in a manner no less vigorous than the rights afforded to the defendant.

A victim is defined as, "any person against whom a criminal offense or delinquent act is committed or any person who is directly and proximately harmed by the commission of the offense or act." The suspect, defendant, or offender is not a victim, and the term victim does not include "a person whom the court finds would not act in the best interests of a deceased, incompetent, minor or incapacitated victim."

Marsy's Law affords victims the following rights:

- (1) To be treated with fairness and respect for the victim's safety, dignity and privacy;
- (2) Upon request, to reasonable and timely notice of all public proceedings involving the criminal offense against the victim, and to be present at all such proceedings;
- (3) To be heard in any public proceeding involving release, plea, sentencing, disposition, or in any public proceeding in which a right of the victim is implicated;
- (4) To reasonable protection from the accused or any person acting on behalf of the accused;
- (5) Upon request, to reasonable notice of any release or escape of the accused;
- (6) Except as authorized by section 10 of Article I of the Ohio Constitution (the criminal defendant's right to Due Process), to refuse an interview, deposition, or other discovery request made by the accused or any person acting on behalf of the accused;
- (7) To full and timely restitution from the person who committed the criminal offense against the victim;
- (8) To proceedings free from unreasonable delay and a prompt conclusion of the case;
- (9) Upon request, to confer with the attorney for the government (i.e. the prosecutor);
- (10) To be informed, in writing, of all rights enumerated in this section.

The victim, the attorney for the government (i.e. the prosecutor) upon request of the victim, or the victim's other lawful representative, in any proceeding involving the criminal offense against the victim or in which the victim's rights are implicated, may assert the rights enumerated in this section and any other right afforded to the victim by law. If the relief sought is denied, the victim or the victim's lawful representative may petition the court of appeals for the applicable district, which shall promptly consider and decide the petition.

Marsy's Law does not create any cause of action for damages or compensation against the state, any political subdivision of the state, any officer, employee, or agent of the state or of any political subdivision, or any officer of the court.
